HONGKONG, OCTOBER 28TH, 1882,

Some two or three years ago, when a London contemporary advocated the importation into England of Chinese washermen, we predicted prompt opposition to such a movement if persevered in. The contingency then seen ed so remote however that no netice was taken of the suggestion by the British working classes, and the subject sport dropped Chinese legends, the deer plays a part. Chu, and I am happy to say the losses up to the for the time. The recent prominence given to the Chinese in England and a proposal said to have been made to introduce Chinese labour into England have led to a demonstration against it by the classes immeditoride this deer, sitting with his back to the Mr. Foss seconded. ately concerned. We yesterday reproduced telegram from a Sydney paper, stating that a meeting was to be held at Westminster to call upon the Government to prevent the importation of Chinese labour. In the San Francisco papers received by the American mail yesterday we find the following telegram, dated London, the 21st September :--"A meeting convened by a democratic fac-"tion was held here last evening to discuss "the proposed introduction of Chinese la-"bour into Great Britain. A motion calling "upon the Government to frame a measure "to prevent such importation of Chinese " was adopted. Mr. PARR, of San Francisco; "said that if the Chinese came to Great " Britain the English workmen might as well-"go and die." The remark attributed to Mr. PARE was undoubtedly foolish, for in many branches the Chinaman cannot compete with the English workman, who would be able to hold his own in skilled labour. But it is unquestionably true that in unskilled labour the Chinese could undersell the British workman, and would render the struggle to live much keener in industrial centres. The proposal to import Chinese tween Arabi, the Sultan, and several Pashes

s one that should not be entertained. The circumstances are wholly different from those prevailing in California and Australia. The English labour market is always overstocked and the only result of the immigration of large bodies of Chinese labourers would be to throw a large number of the British workpeople out of employment, to the increase pauperism, the spread of discontent, and the disturbance of the peace. The climate the United Kingdom is unsuited to th Chinese constitution; and this would doubtless be discovered in time and to some extent check their influx, but the arrival of even a few thousand Chinese labourers and artizans would assuredly cause riots among the British workmen, who would regard them as the vanguard of an invading army, which could be recruited from what seems to them an inexhaustible population. The Chinese, on their part, will act wisely in declining to listen to any tempting offers that may be made to them from England. The journey is long and costly, the climate rigorous, and the lower classes of the population would prove bitterly hostile. There are far better fields for the employment of Chinese industry much nearer home. The Straits Settlements and Malay States, the different provinces of Borneo, Cochin-China, Islands are open to their enterprise, and if in British territory. the Netherlands Indies, and the Hawaiian these fail to furnish sufficient outlets for the slightest foreknowledge on the part of any one surplus labour in China then the vast empire in the Garrison that any assistance would be of Brazil is ready to receive them by tens thousands. A moderate number of Chinese coolies would also, we believe, find a wel come in the South African Colonies, as they for camping at Kowloon were all ready very capital to $2,500,000 by increasing the value of would render the colonists less dependent The large Edition contains ONE THOUSAND | to pretend that they would meet with any welcome in England. The outery raised on the Pacific Slope against them would be repeated in the United Kingdom, and with far more reason. No true friend of the Chinese would for a moment counsel them to take a course that would so obviously band the working classes of great Britain against enough to say would be done, but the naval

THE THREATENED ATTACK ON

KOWLOON CITY. The ramour current on Thursday night as to the apprehended outbreak of the Tried Society at Chinese Kowloon, though correct in the main, was at fault-in some particulars, and that referring to the despatch of British troops to proteet Chinese territory, which seemed somewhat extraordinary, has proved to be inaccurate. bear that on Thursday the inhabitants of Kowloon City were in a state of panic owing to reports which were rife, that the place would be attacked that night by the much dreaded Tried Society. and that the Mandarin would be killed. panic seems to have gained such ground that some of the inhabitants left the place during the day, and came over to Hongkong for safety. News of this kind was not slow in reaching the ear! of officials in this colony, together with further Information that if the attack on Kowloon city failed, the men of the society would direct their attention to making a raid upon British Kow-loon for the purpose of plunder, in consequence of which His Excellency the Administrator deemed it advisable to take prompt measures to protect British property on the other side of the water. With regard to the action taken, we have received from the Brigade Office the following copy of a Garrison order :-"2. - Movement of Troops. - His Excellency the

Wotton (Solicitor). The SECRETARY rend the notice convening the meeting. The CHAIRMAN suid-Gentlemen, you have heard the notice convening the meeting read and the business now is to submit the report for your adoption. It has not been the custom at meetings of the Society to read the report, as members have had it so long in their hands that they are presumed to be thoroughly acquainted with it. I would only remark that although the business for 1881 shows a falling off in the receipts of premium, this is entirely owing to the considerable decrease in rates of premia during that period, and you will be glad to see that although the premia was smaller the result is better. If you sanction the payment of the dividends. &c., as proposed in the report,

ADVENTURES OF MUMMIES IN

FRANCE. M. Maspero, the Egyptian traveller who recently came to France, bringing with him a mummy from the land of the Pharaohs, declares that the Egyptian Custom House officers, in their anxiety to levy a tax upon everything, made him pay duty for the notable who accompanied him, swathed in his cerements, as "dried fish." Perhaps they knew that half the mummies which have been exported and have found a place in different European museums are spurious, and that their description of the descendants of the Pharachs was far from being improbable. Another adventure, equally grotesque, happened to the defunct Egyptians who were sent over to . Leuvre to increase the State collection when Charles X. was on the throne in 1830. They arrived in Paris a few weeks before the Revolution broke out which compelled the last of the Bourbons to take refuge in flight and , thus prepared the accession of the younger branch of the House of France. During the long voyage the mummies had been damaged by the salt water, and when they were taker out of the cases in which they had beer packed, the director of the Louvie Museum who superintended their arrival, declared that it was impossible, owing to the advanced state of decomposition in which they vere, to place them among his collection o antiquities. The "Notables" who had laid in state for centuries were destined to b buried in the garden of the Louvre and to enhance the luxuriance of some parterre o flowers, fulfilling the legend of immorta Casar. During the three days of July the No tional Guards who fell while fighting agains the troops were buried in the same place but when their final place of sepulchre bac been prepared under the ruins of the Basti at the base of the column, their remain were exhumed and placed in the vault which is visited on the 30th of July by the survivor of the struggle which made Louis Philipp King of France." The ashes of the mummie were also removed, and those who pay a las tribute of respect to their comrades who fel on the steps of Saint Roch and elsewher little think that they are mourning over those who saw the pyramide building an remembered the legand of the crossing the Red Sca.

THE NEW CRAZE.

MR. LEFFINGWELL'S SPECULATION. "What I mean to have," exclaimed Mr. Leffingwell, "my idea is a trout farm, you see—" One man picked up an Indian club, while another gently drew the sword from his cane. A third reached for a dumb bell, and the fourth commenced hail ing off his coat and vest. "You see there is no brook running through this place of mine," continued Mr. Leffingwell, "and the trout, gentleman, come right up to my door. As a spec ... They sprang to their feet and bore down on him. "As a speculation, I think a trout farm first-class," concluded Mr. Leffingwell, calmly.
